Cable 243
https://www.jfklibrary.org/Asset-Viewer/Archives/JFKNSF-316-008.aspx
Described by some historians as the “single most controversial cable of the Vietnam War,” Cable 243 was drafted on Saturday August 24, 1963 when President Kennedy, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, and CIA Director John McCone were all out of town. The telegram set a course for the eventual coup in Vietnam on November 1, 1963 leading to the fall of President Diem and his assassination on November 2, 1963. The “green light” cable is the second document in the digitized National Security Files (Digital Identifier JFKNSF-316-008), Meetings on Vietnam: General, August 1963: 24-31.

Click on the “secret recording” hyperlink on the front of the president’s desk and you can hear excerpts from White House presidential recordings of four meetings between President Kennedy and his highest level Vietnam advisors in late August of 1963. After Cable 243 was sent and during the course of four days, President Kennedy met with his advisors to discuss the evolving situation in Vietnam and what steps should be taken. There was considerable disagreement between the State Department advisors, who had drafted Cable 243, and the President’s military and intelligence advisors on whether the coup was advisable and what support it would have in Vietnam with the Vietnamese military.

National Security Action Memoranda
This web page includes a selected listing of 272 National Security Action Memoranda (NSAMs) originating from the Meetings and Memoranda Series of the National Security Files, a sub-file of the John F. Kennedy Presidential Papers. The memoranda were sent from President Kennedy or his National Security Advisor, McGeorge Bundy, to various government agencies and staff members. Several of these NSAMs are related to Vietnam.
